

National Diabetes Footcare Audit: healing feet faster

Your diabetic foot care team is taking part in a national project to measure the healing of diabetic foot ulcers.

The project is called the National Diabetes Footcare Audit (NDFA) and aims to identify how foot ulcers can be best managed.

To take part in the Audit, your footcare team will collect information about any ulcer you may have. The data will be held on a secure electronic system. The collection, and use of such information, is strictly controlled by law and follows national standards of confidentiality and security. For further information about how the information about your ulcer is used, please see the NDFA patient information leaflet.

By taking part in the NDFA it shows that this service is committed to improving the care of people with diabetes.
